Photographer Billy Davidson

I come from a family of artists. Both my parents were well-known painters, and my grandmother had been a jazz singer. They hung around with a lot of people from the art world and they were always taking me to concerts and exhibitions. Although I was proud of my parents, I thought their friends were a bit crazy. They seemed so different to everyone else. I just wanted to have a normal life with normal friends and family.

I was shy as a teenager so I didn't enjoy team sports or hanging out with friends. When I was younger, my main interest was comics, but I'd got bored of them by then. My parents were a bit worried because I didn't have any hobbies so one day, they bought me a camera. It was the perfect gift because it was something I could do alone. I always had my camera with me and I took photos of people cutting the grass, drinking coffee or sleeping on a train. I was really interested in normal people doing normal things.

A few years later, my parents were having a dinner party for old friends and one of the guests owned an art gallery. Although I wasn't at the party, he saw some of my photos lying around and he really liked them. A couple of days later, he called me because he wanted to show them in his gallery. At first, I was pleased that he thought my work was good enough for an exhibition. However, over the next few weeks I became nervous about showing my photos in public. I was sure people wouldn't like them and I tried to cancel the exhibition.

Of course, the gallery owner was upset because he had invited lots of people. I felt terrible, but my dad spoke to me and he was really kind. He said he was proud of me and he wanted everyone to see my photographs. In the end, I agreed to do the exhibition and it was better than I expected. In fact, some famous actors and models were there and they wanted me to take their photographs. It's nice that they asked me, but I decided not to do that. My real interest is in everyday people and things.

  - B Going out with friends

- 3 How did Billy get his first exhibition?
  - A He called a gallery owner that he knew.
  - B He met a gallery owner at a party.
  - C His parents organised it for him.
  - D His parents' friend suggested it.

Alquézar, Spain

Aragon is a region in the north of Spain known for its castles. There are around 500 of them and they sometimes have medieval villages built around them. Alquézar is one example and some people say it is one of the most beautiful villages in Spain. Situated 660 metres above sea level in a national park, Alquézar is surrounded by green-blue rivers and red-brown hills. Visitors to the village are guaranteed to be amazed by the spectacular views.

The castle at the top of the village was built in the ninth century, but it's been made bigger over the years. Although it was first used for defence, it later became a place for religious activity. Some of the oldest houses in the village date back to the fourteenth century, but they have changed very little over the centuries. Walking through the narrow streets, it's easy to imagine that you have gone back in time.

Only around 300 people always live in the village and in winter it is a sleepy place. The main industry in the area is the production of grapes and some of the villagers have professions in that industry. There are, of course, plumbers, mechanics and other local services, but there are no big factories or offices. However, during the summer months, the village really comes to life. Thousands of tourists arrive in the area, which creates many jobs in restaurants, gift shops, hotels and campsites.

Most tourists want to spend their time exploring the village and enjoying the relaxed atmosphere. The narrow streets are a good way to avoid the hot summer sun. However, visitors should also visit the castle and enjoy the spectacular views of the countryside. You should look out for vultures and eagles flying in circles high above the village. Visitors who like a little adventure can also take part in outdoor activities, such as walking, canoeing and climbing.

If you live in a city, Alquézar is the perfect place to go for a relaxing weekend away. Although it doesn't take long to walk around the village, you won't get bored. There's always something new to see and because cars aren't allowed in the centre of the village, it always feels calm. There are also some lovely restaurants where you can eat traditional food while enjoying the wonderful views.
