Writing Genres

Narrative Writing (Story)

- An imaginative or exciting story.
- Remember: characters, setting, detailed descriptions.
- Usually in the past tense.
- Have your characters encounter a problem that they need to solve or overcome.
- PLAN before starting your story.

Writing Genres

Free Writing

- Can but doesn't have to be a story!
- Can be based on a picture or a question or even a word.
- You can make a plan, or you can just start to write!

Writing Genres

Explanation

- Explain how something happens or works.
- Often starts with a question.
- Answer with a clear, simple explanation.
- Explanation texts are non-fiction (factual).

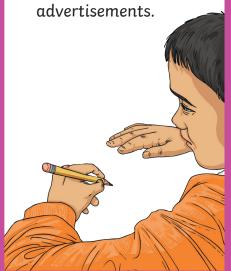

Writing Genres

Persuasive

- Written to persuade or convince the reader.
- Can often take the form of a debate.
- Starts with a statement or argument.
- Discuss the statement in lots of detail.

Writing Genres

Poetry

- Acrostic: the writer uses the letters of a word to outline the first letter of each line in their poem.
- Shape: follows a certain shape based on the subject / topic of the poem.
- Rhyme: Some poems rhyme, some do not.
- Limerick: a poem with five lines. (The first and last line are often the same.)

Writing Genres

Procedure

- Give instructions in a series of steps.
- Factual, short, sequential instructions that are clearly laid out.
- Should include a list of what is needed so the reader can prepare what is needed before starting.
- Use numbers or bullet points to separate each step.

Writing Genres

Recount

- Tell the reader about an event which happened.
- Can be personal or can be factual
- Outline the setting, people involved, and the events in chronological order.

Writing Genres

Writing to Socialise

- Emails / Invitations
 / Thank You notes
 / Cards etc.
- Formal or Informal Letters
- Letters follow this format:
 - Greeting to the recipient
 - 2. Body of the letter containing the main message
 - 3. Prompt and farewell which may ask the recipient to RSVP, or respond to the letter before writing a farewell message